

D.C.'S RISING STARS

The National Law Journal spotlights 40 private, government and public interest advocacy attorneys—each 40 or under—who are leaders in the law.

D.C.'S RISING STARS

JONATHAN SU

LATHAM & WATKINS, 37

The two years that Latham & Watkins partner Jonathan Su spent in the White House Counsel's Office provided him with crash courses in politics, media relations and crisis management—excellent preparation, he said, for his white-collar defense and investigations practice.

Su's work at the White House included congressional investigations, nominations and the review of executive-clemency petitions. Su previously spent six years as an assistant U.S. attorney in Maryland. His victories included securing guilty verdicts in 2011 in a $70 million Ponzi scheme targeting homeowners. Su has established a robust practice since joining Latham in April 2014, including pro bono matters.

—ZOE TILLMAN